

Why We Need A Post Graduate Primary Care Physician Vs MBBS Primary Care Physician

- India student graduate from medical college after 12th grade
- 5 1/ year MBBS youngest in licensed physician compared to most developed countries
- Most of developed countries license to practice given after a post graduate training.
- MBBS graduate patient contact hours with patient is less,
- Responsibility to treat patents is minimal
- Where as post graduate two to three years of clinical trainings more contact with patient case, more responsibility, post graduate training gives more confident less mistakes in patient care.
- People comfortable post graduate doctor than MBBS graduate

- Education in undergrad and post graduate will give basic knowledge for being physician, you need continuous learning all life.
- Family medicine or any other specialty is lifelong learning process
- Their society or association give continuous knowledge through their journals, CME practice parameters
- Family medicine graduate has support of their association The Academy of Family Physicians of India and internationally
- The Royal College of General Practitioners, The American Academy of Family Physicians was founded in 1947, Founded in 1967, the Society of Teachers of Family Medicine etc,

- MBBS graduate are at disadvantage has no association to follow and update continuously
- Specialty association information followed by their members to enhance their knowledge.
- Ultimate goal is provide high quality safe health to people of India. Family medicine or any other specialty is lifelong learning process
